and behind the scenes . . .

Although everything seemed to go smoothly on stage, off stage was another story. Confusion raged as actors and actresses were made up in the crowded dressing rooms. Mrs. McDowell's speech class helped transform the seniors into the characters they portrayed.

Behind the scenes much direction was needed to be sure that every prop was in its proper position when the lights came up. Ed Read, Stage Manager, supervised the stage crew and props. Lois Hirt, Student Director, served as Mr. Dewey's right hand.

Above: Student Director, Lois Hirt, takes a few minutes out to check the script. Below: Ed Read, Stage Manager, makes a few last minute changes of the set. To the right we see a transformation which takes place as they apply make up to Marlene Roth before the play.

spring concert

The band and chorus, each under the direction of Mr. Perdue Powlen, presented an entertainment of classic and popular music at the spring concert.

Songs ranged from "Tammy" to "Close to You." Band selections included "Jubilant Overture," "Rock Artistry," and "Red's White and Blue."

The brass section displayed the new uniforms during a patriotic finale.

holiday spirit in music

Bringing the Christmas spirit to the Monticello community was the Twin Lakes High School chorus. Joe VanMeter, lighting director, surprised everyone by being caught on stage before the Golden Throats started the evening of music.

The chorus opened with "Christmas Is" in an informal manner. Continuing with this holiday spirit, the chorus sang other selections, including: "Toyland," "I Wonder As I Wander," and "For Unto Us."

Kathy Rubeck and Tim Shideler, pictured on the opposite page, were the soloists in the concert.

special events

class of '72 worked hard

"Hey, you guys, quit moving the ladder!"

The junior class worked hard preparing for the prom. Some had started weeks before, deciding on the programs, getting thirty-six dozen cookies baked, sending invitations, and making the rules for the prom. Others helped by painting the murals. The characters and murals were then transported to the ballroom at Indiana Beach, where everyone helped to decorate until Thursday night before the prom. By then, the ballroom had been transformed from a dull, dark room into an enchanting journey along the yellow brick road.

Beth Dickerson and Vicki Logan worked diligently on the characters for the prom.

to produce the land of oz

Brenda, Vicki, and Pam had the tedious job of unwinding rolls of foil.

"Hurry up with the stapler, this wall's getting heavy!"

"Well, first, you must take this and hook it to that. Then, take this thing and wrap it around that thing over there."

"And now the moment we've all been waiting for." Mr. Ryan made his traditional announcement for the last time.

The castle of Oz shadowed the crowning of King Willie Roth and Queen Anna Murray. Members of the court were Tom Gordy, Anna Manley, Jim Ware, and Ruth Hinshaw. Ed Hanna and Marlene Roth presented the court their gifts and flowers.

homecoming '71 first october

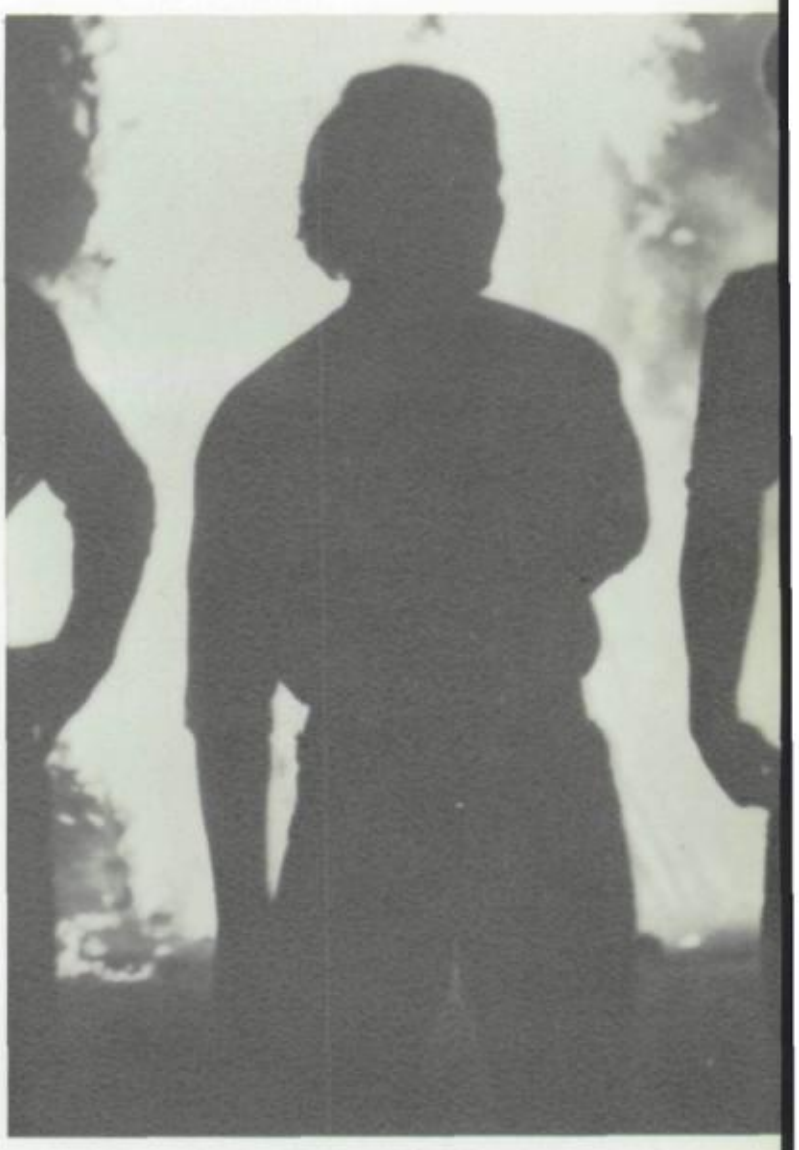
Mr. Crabb gave one of his famous speeches.

Spirit continued to build as the Student Council carried out its plans to make Homecoming bigger and better than ever before. The week started off with Clash Day. Each day the outfits changed until Friday which was the traditional Red and White Day. On Friday, the junior class was awarded the spirit stick for having the most class participation.

"Come on, you guys, there's lots of room."

big event of the year
1, 1971

Art Club and Sunshine were two of the many floats in the parade.



Cavaliers provided music for the Homecoming Dance.

On Thursday evening the first Homecoming Parade was held. The police escorted it and were followed by the team, cheerleaders, various club floats, and students' cars. After the parade, the biggest bonfire which has ever been seen at T.L. was lit. It had been built and guarded by senior boys. The annual Homecoming Dance was held after the game. The week was gloriously brought to an end by the Indians victory over North Newton victory, highlighted by the

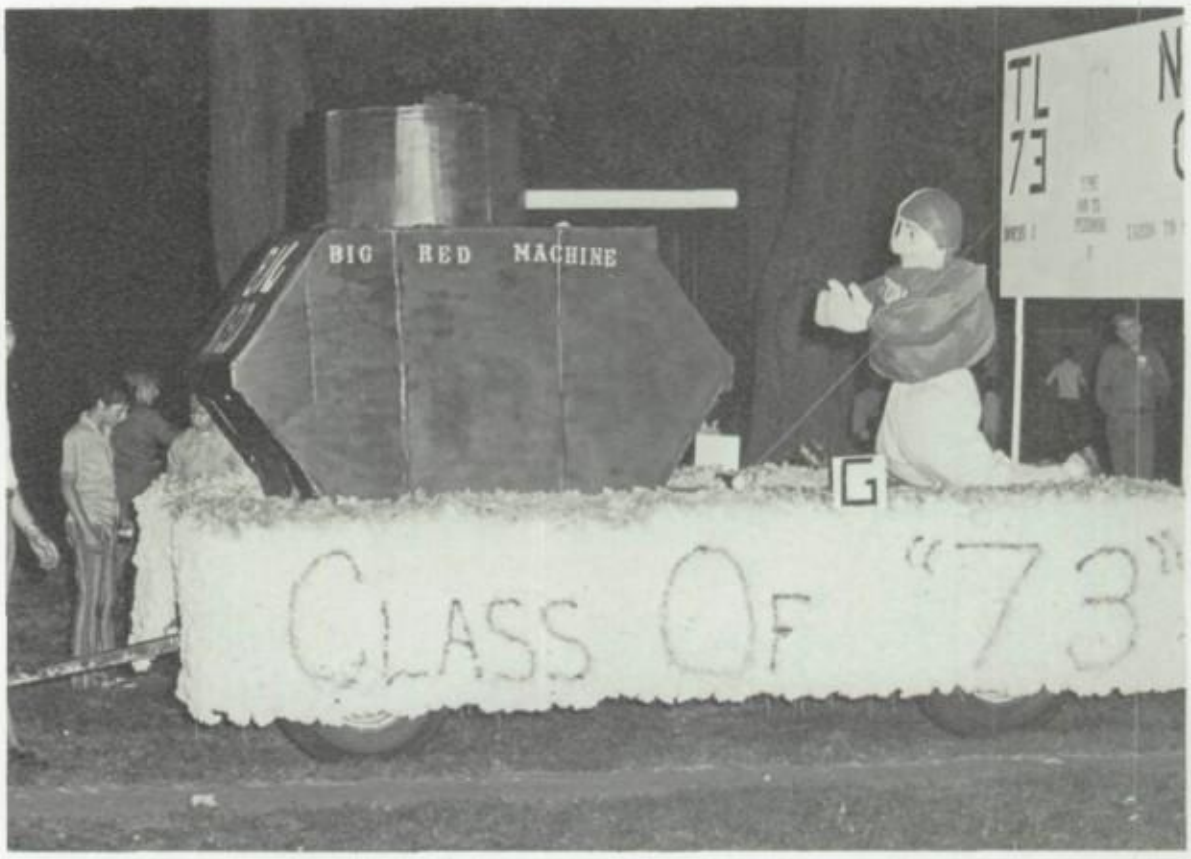
"Where is it hidden?" "In the barn west of the school." "Sh-sh-sh. Here comes a junior!"

What was the subject of this conversation? Hidden floats for Homecoming of course!

Competition proved to be a strong force throughout the week. Sophomores, juniors, and seniors slaved more than thirty hours apiece on their floats. Up to five thousand paper tissue flowers were stuffed into chicken wire. By the end of the week the hay wagons were transformed into signs of spirit and cooperation.



crowning of the queen

Finally the night of the big game came. Spirit reached a peak and exploded when Twin Lakes beat North Newton with a score of 31 to 0.

Halftime was the highlight of the victory. Amid the cheers of the crowd the winners of the float contest were announced. "A Dream Comes True in Spirit," created by the sophomore class, was awarded first place. The juniors with "The Big Red Machine" received second.

The queen and her court provided a rustic setting in their autumn colored suits and flowers.

Trina Murray, who was escorted by Terry Jones, reigned as Homecoming Queen. Senior candidates on her court were: Marty Bridge, escorted by Alan Sickler; Diana Roth, whose escort was Jeff Stine; Kathy Rubeck, escorted by Ed Fisher; and Emily Wilson, escorted by Bruce Sweet.

Junior princess Debbie Brown was escorted by Brad Adams and Phil Jones escorted Abbie Tag, sophomore princess.

the birds and the bees

How important are the birds and the bees? What is the difference between the male and the female fruit fly? What comparisons can be made between the physical make-up of a cat and a human?

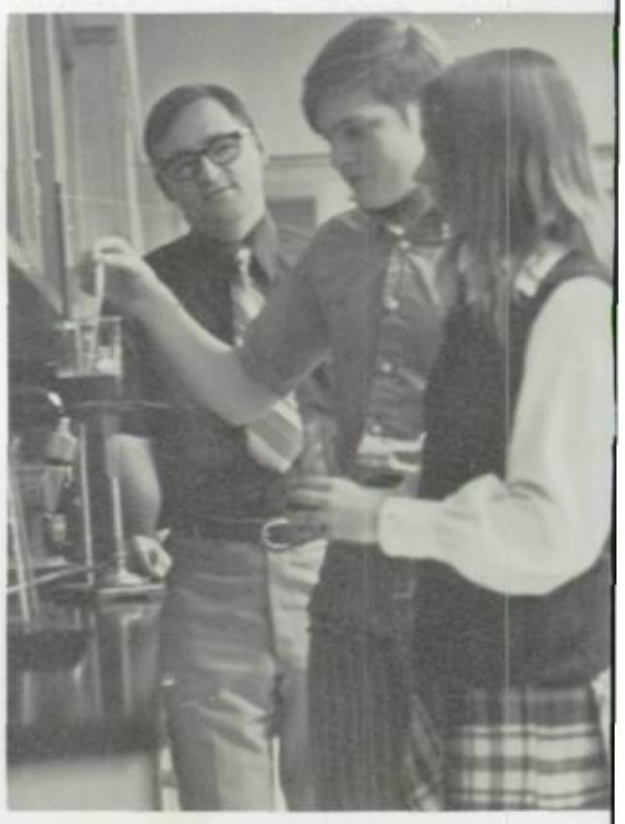
Students in advanced biology, instructed by Mr. Crabb, discovered the answers to these questions and others throughout the year.

At times students seemed rather disillusioned with the course. Quiet screams and "ugh's" were voiced when Mr. Crabb distributed maggots for observation.

"Mine's still alive!" was one remark made quite frequently as the biologists conquered the study of living things.

"Ace, this is a biology class, not a cork stacking session."

Denise Fuller studies physical features of a fruit fly.



"Come on Cheryl put that stuff in. It wo blow up."

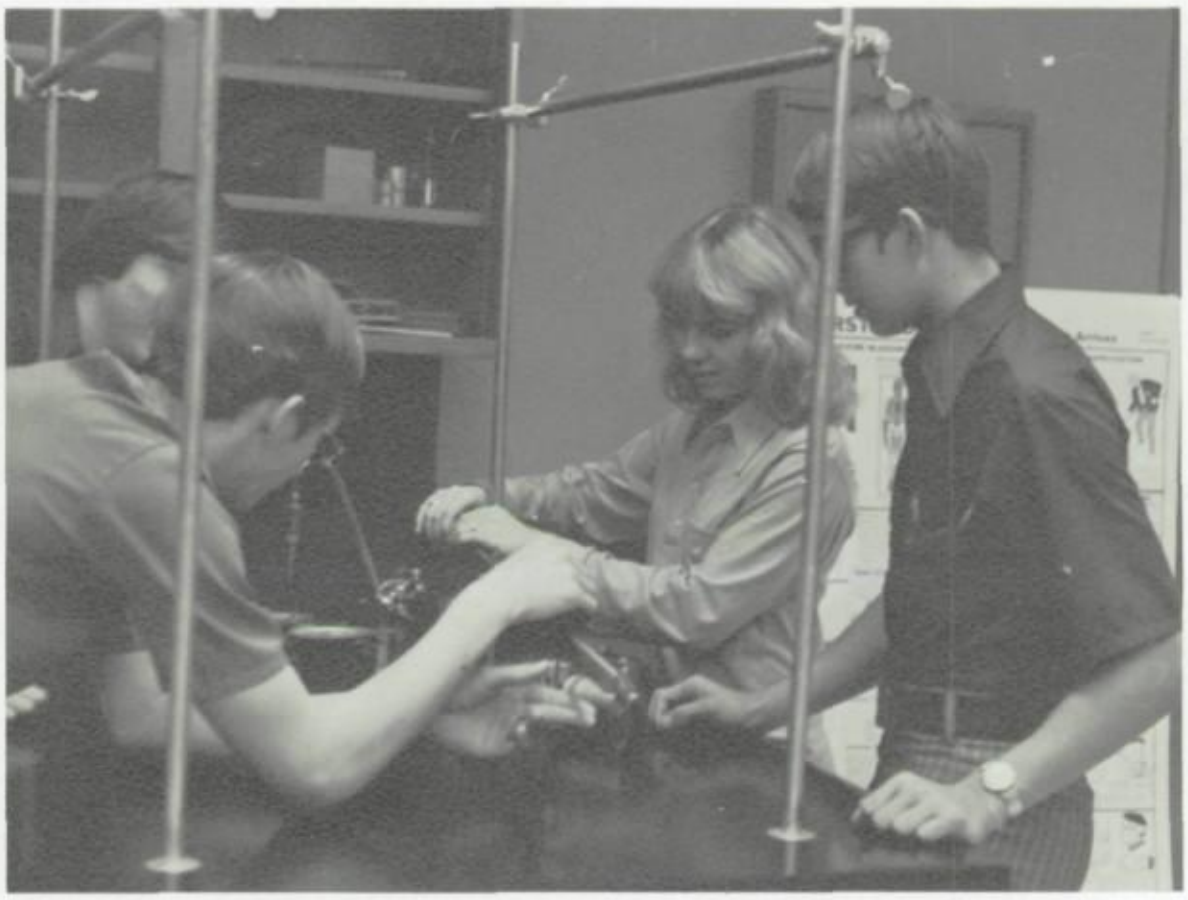
physics in action

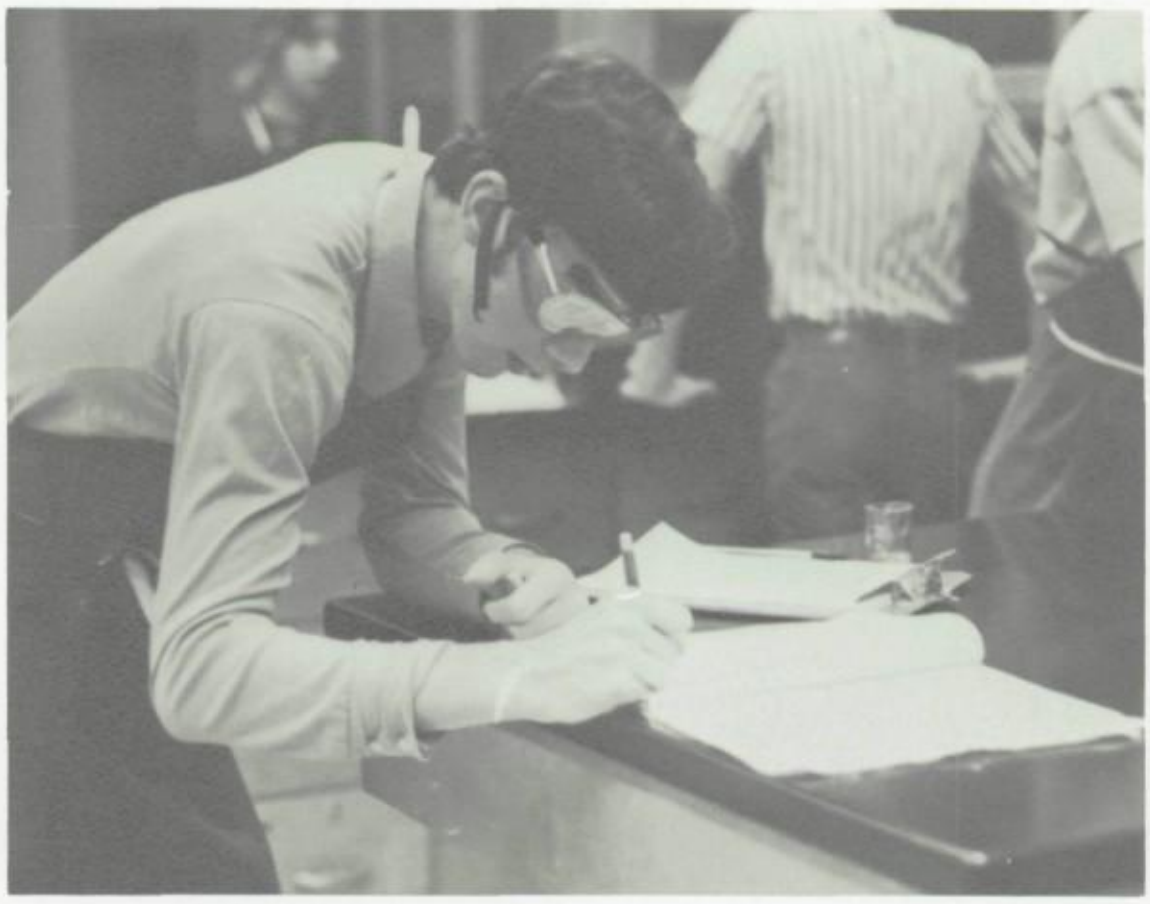
"One must do one's experiment"

The resultant force by using scalar and vector quantities can be figured out by . . . You may ask yourself what they are talking about, but if you were standing outside the door of physics class here at Twin Lakes you would hear conversation such as this coming out as they study the physical science such as: forces, atomic structures, nuclear reactions, sound and light.

They then put this knowledge to work each week when they brave their way through experiments to prove what they have learned.



Vicki and Chris balance a meterstick.



"Let's see now . . . the sine for angle A equals cosine of . . . .

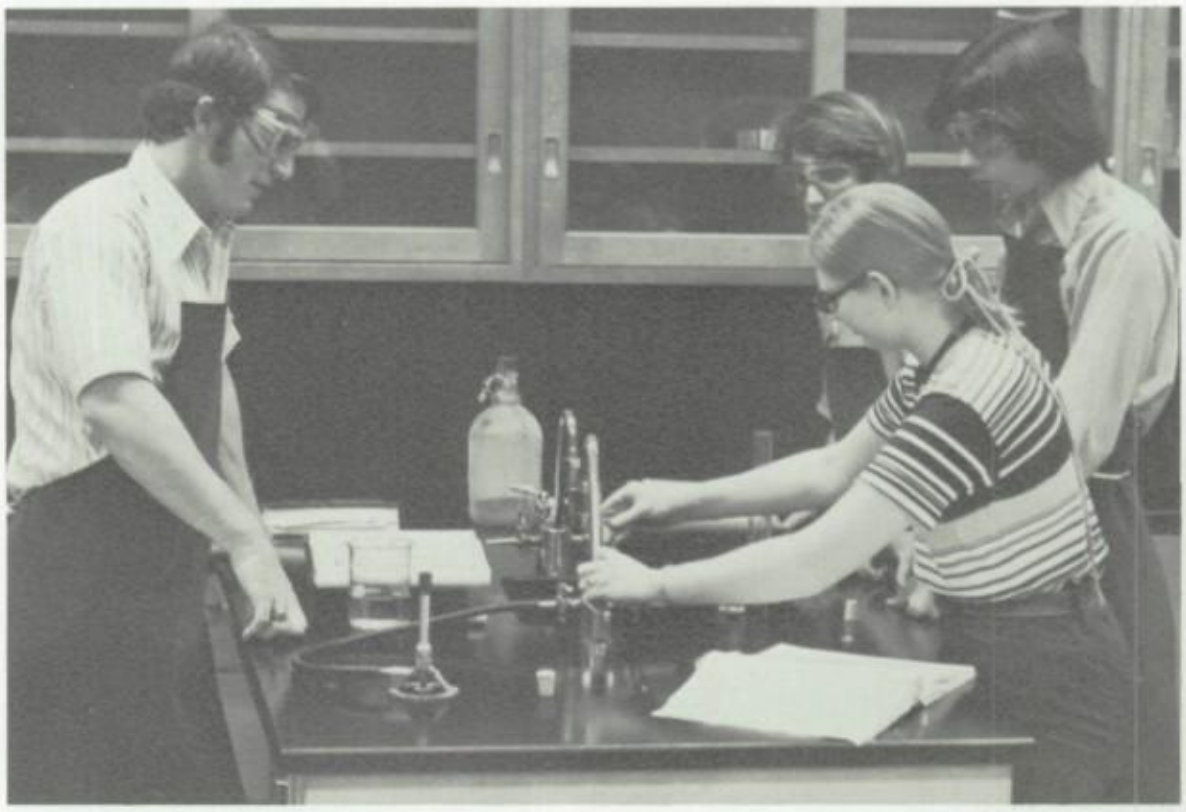
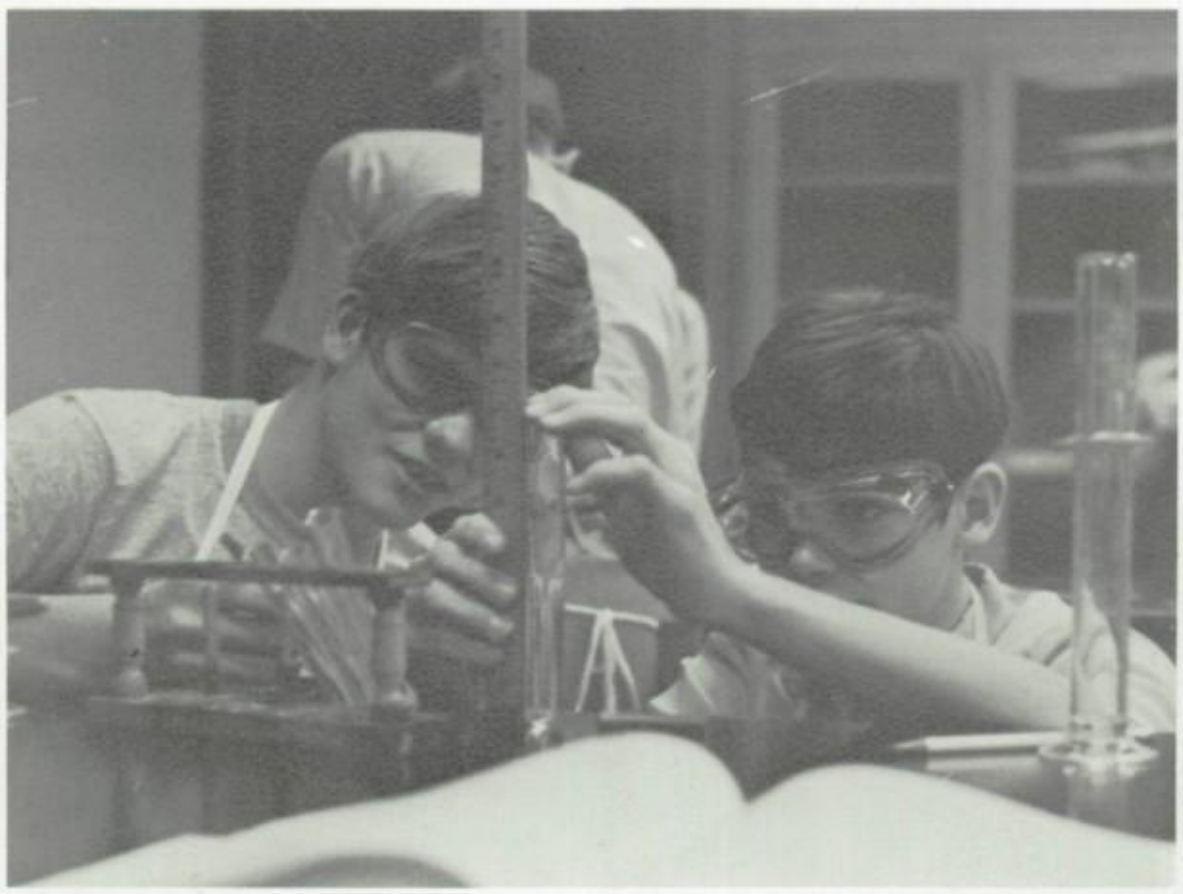
. . . . .

The students struggled diligently to memorize the periodic table, the language of chemistry.

Chemicals were put into the exciting use of experimenting as the students don their goggles and aprons to explore the realities of the realm of chemistry which was opened to them through the periodic table.



Denise Shull instructs the boys on an experiment.



Jim McClinic and Bob Downey measure the meters of a test tube.

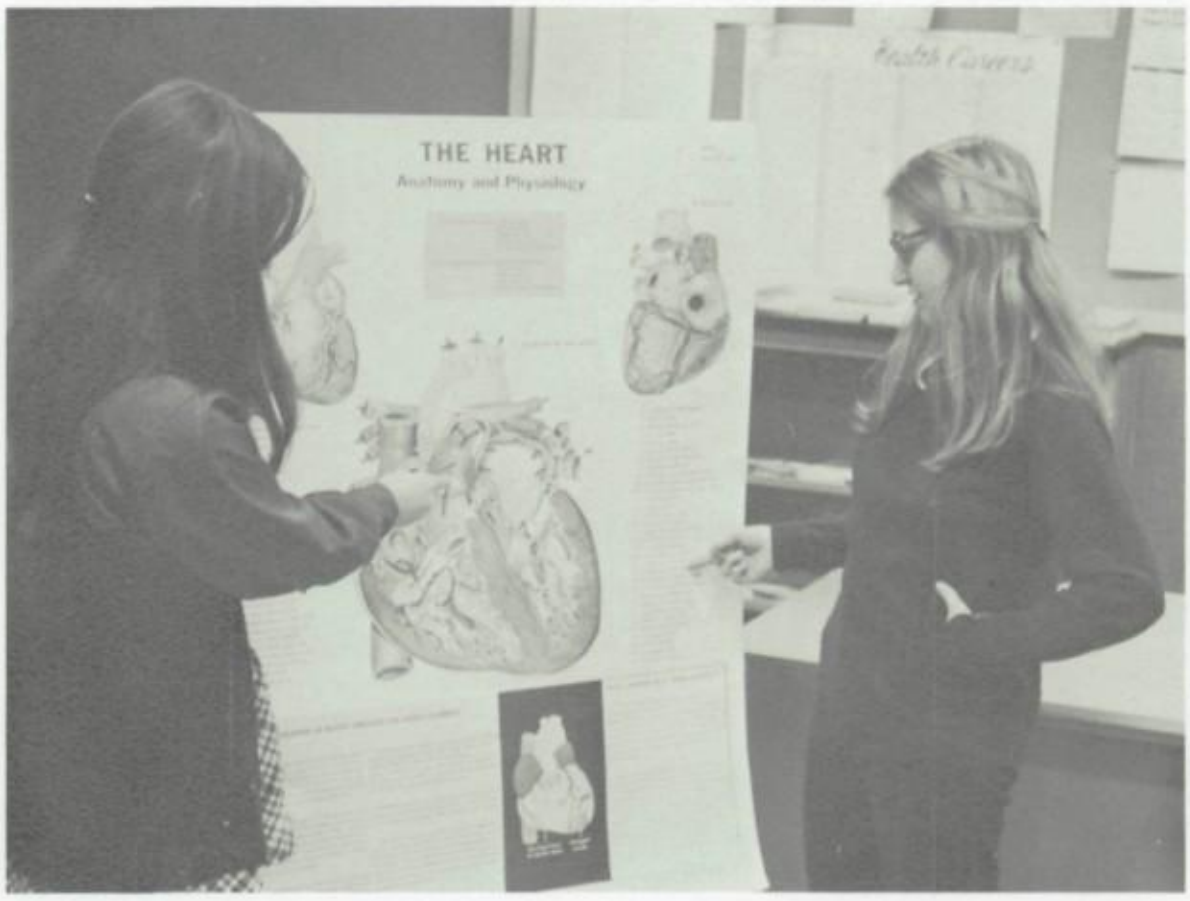
health careers

Vanessa Eudy and Beth Davis study the internal parts of a human.

Emerging into a health careers classroom the atmosphere brings forth that of students learning about the interesting careers in the medical field. Many skills were first learned in the classroom and then later in the year they rotated in on the job training at various medical orientated facilities.

The classroom work and the various jobs helped the students to decide whether or not they wanted to go into further education of a medical field or just use the skills they had learned to get a job right out of high school.

Mrs. Overbeck answers questions about the field of nursing.



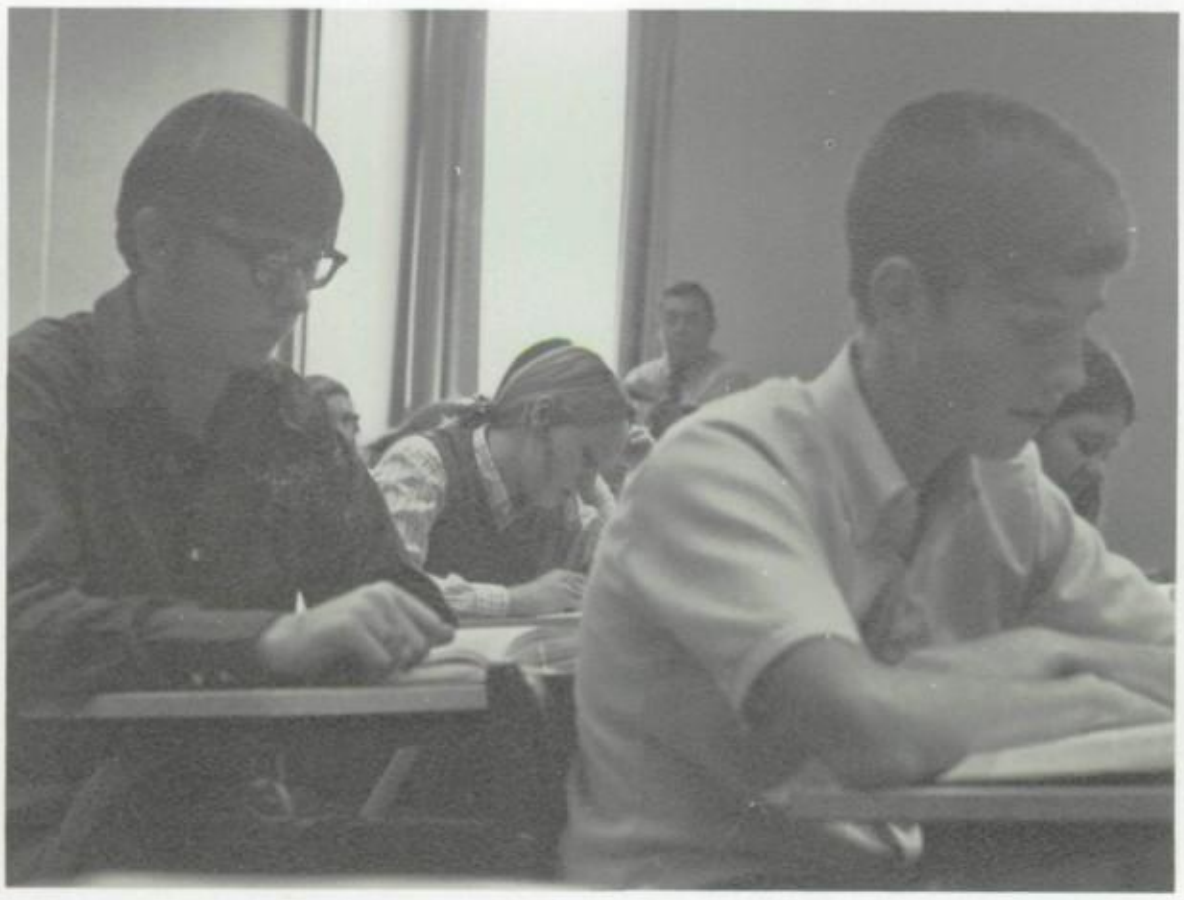
Robin Tessier and Nancy Crowell point out the vital parts of the heart.

world and u. s. history

Wandering into the world of social studies introduced us to the study of world history. This course taught us about the early civilizations and the development of world situations up to today. U. S. History reached more into detail of the beginning of America and its growth and the factors that influenced this growth.

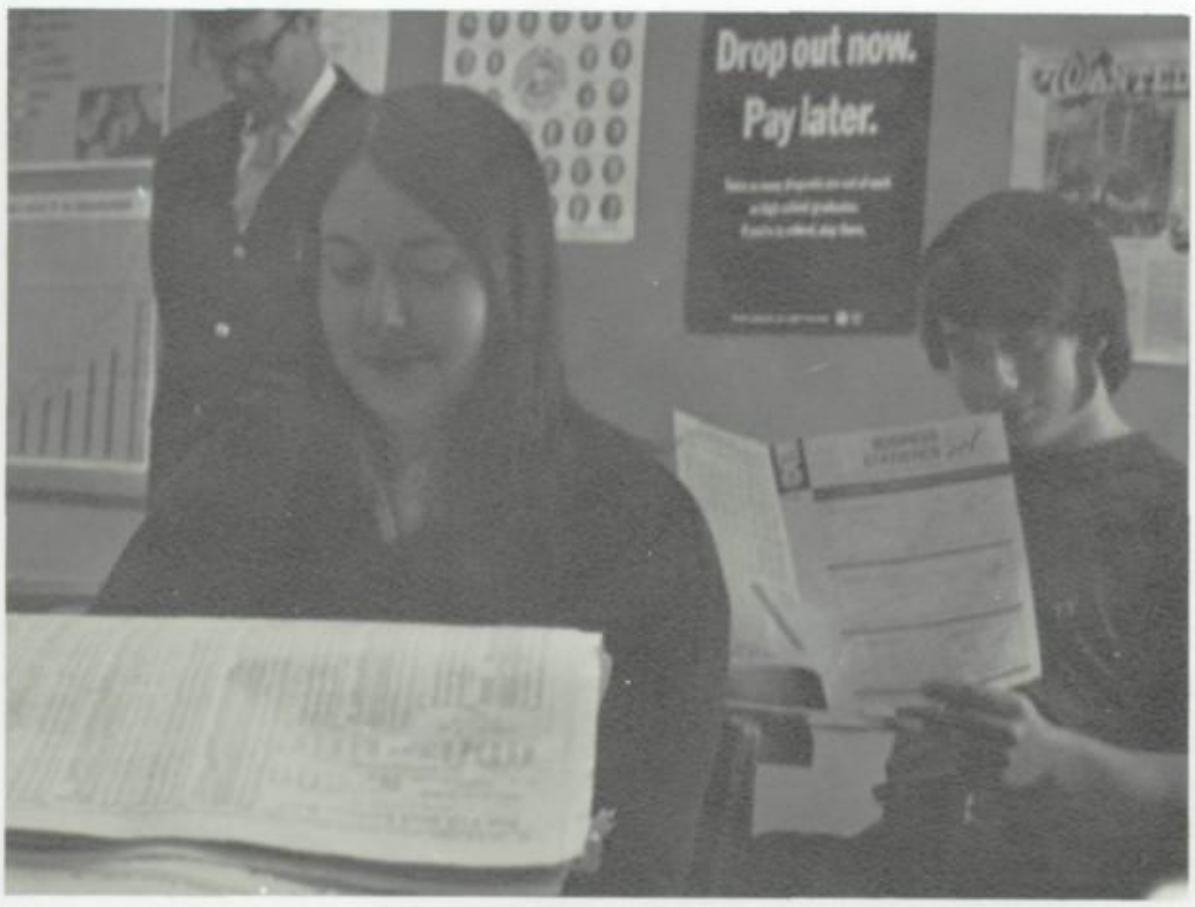
Mr. Lottes, Mr. Dove, and Mr. Breitenbach have all showed us through these two courses the true importance of freedom and appreciation we should have to live in the United States.

Diligent study is ever present in Mr. Dove's U. S. History class.



government and economics

If only everyone were so enthused . . . .



Jan Harwood and Harry Foglesong are optimistic about their investments.
Right: Sandy Crader explains the division of powers and the U. S. Constitution.

Men are capable of governing themselves. This fundamental idea was studied by seniors in relation to the government of the United States, along with the government of our own state, Indiana.

Students explored the various court systems, made comparisions of our type of government to the government structure of other nations, and delved into the United States Constitution.

The highlight of the year occurred when students in government classes were chosen to hold city offices and then went to meet their counterpart and learn about his position.

Economic classes studied individual financial affairs, the monetary system of our country, and business concerns. Students were required to establish a budget for a model family. The stock market brought wealth to some and sent others to the poor farm.

Economics Days gave the students the opportunity to view Monticello's industries in action.

Mayor Seidholz explains some of the city ordinances to the three student mayors: Ed Hanna, Jim Highes, and Jim Gill.

Charlene adjusts the tape of RCA's computor.

Debbie Demerly read the minutes of the city council meeting while Mrs. Heath and Diana Roth looked on.

The students eyed the complicated machinery of the telephone company.

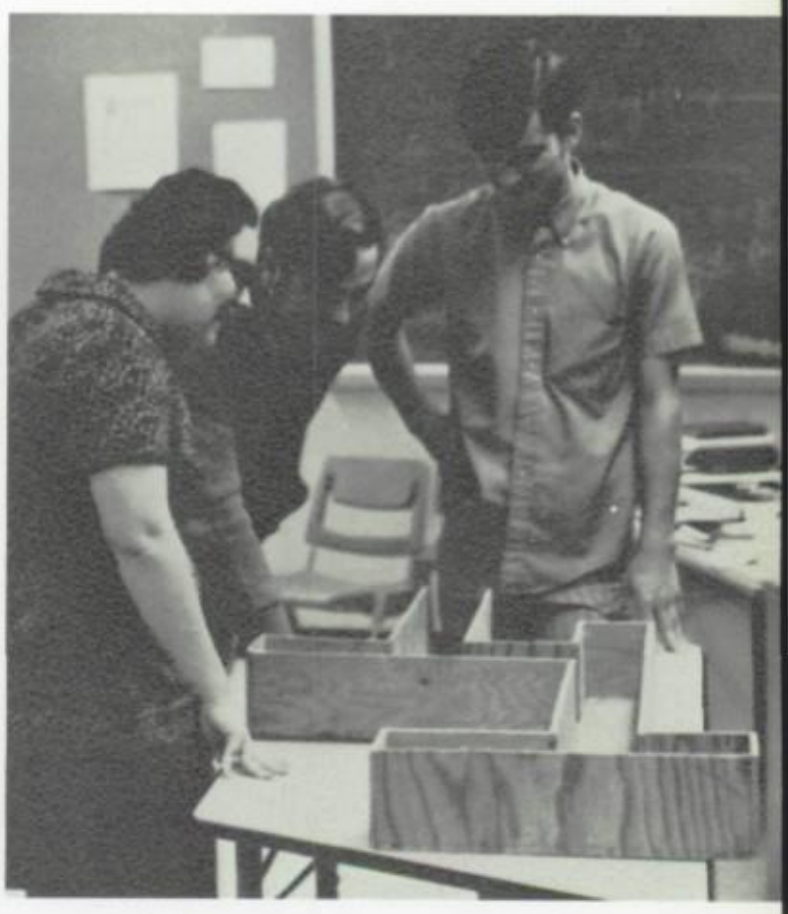
sociology and psychology

In the emergence of the humanities of sociology and psychology we see manifesting themselves, juvenile court hearings, meetings in the park with loved ones, big white rats running mazes, the mystifying facts divulged by the Ouija board, and extra sensory perception.

In psychology time is spent attempting to determine why living organisms behave the way they do. Sociology takes these individuals, their behavior and integrates them in order to describe group behavior.

"I thought somebody said that the Ouija board could talk!"

Jeff Hanna reprimands Sue Bailey for a harsh statement.



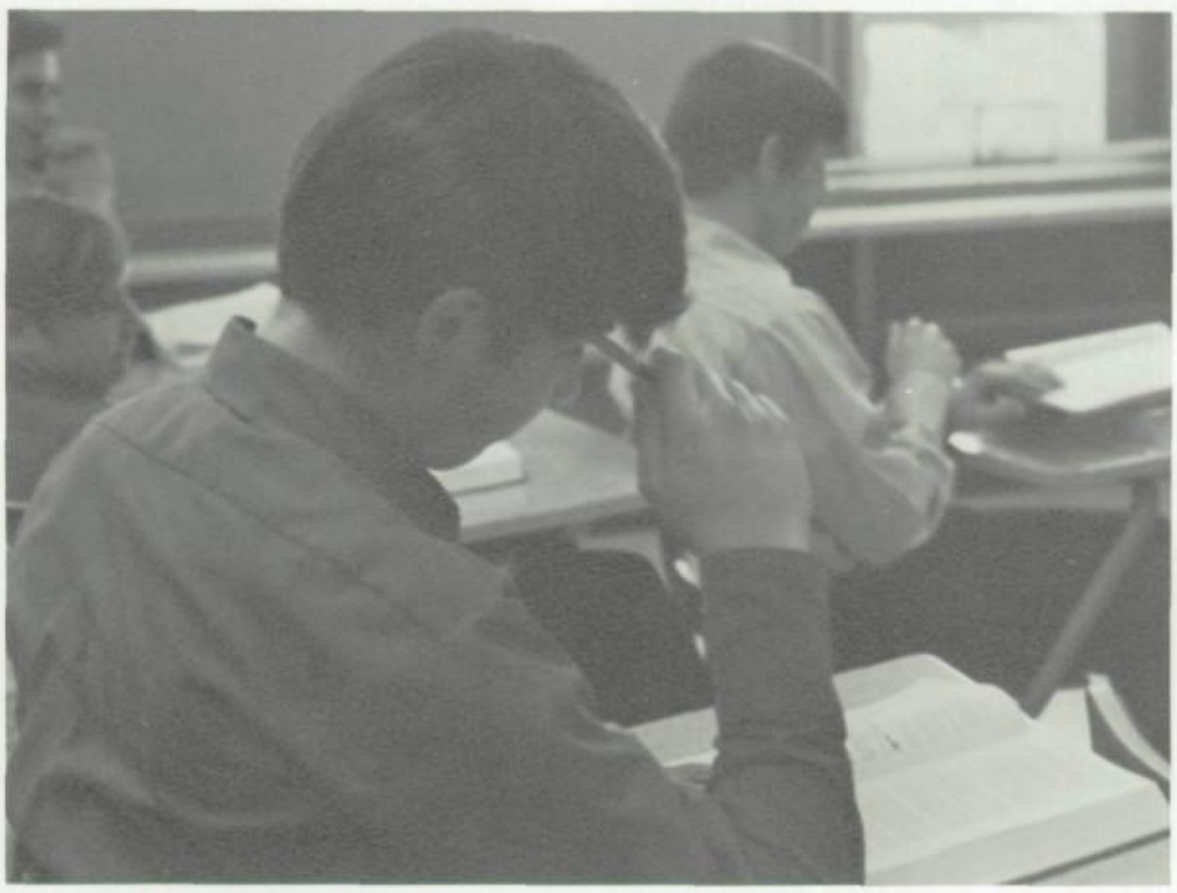
Roger and Shirley continue to prod the rat, while Bob insists that it isn't going to move.

concepts of mathematics

The concepts of mathematics were taught through various courses: business math, geometry, algebra, advanced math, and calculus. Numbers, the students learned, weren't just ordinary, but they consisted of natural numbers, real numbers, whole numbers, positive integers, negative integers, fractions, square roots, and various other combinations.

The application of these concepts of math were applied to the many different kinds of problems. Business math used numbers to figure percentages, costs, and overheads. Geometry used numbers as degrees of angles in the various geometric figures. Algebra, advanced math and calculus, worked out complicated numerical problems that only the college bound care to tackle.

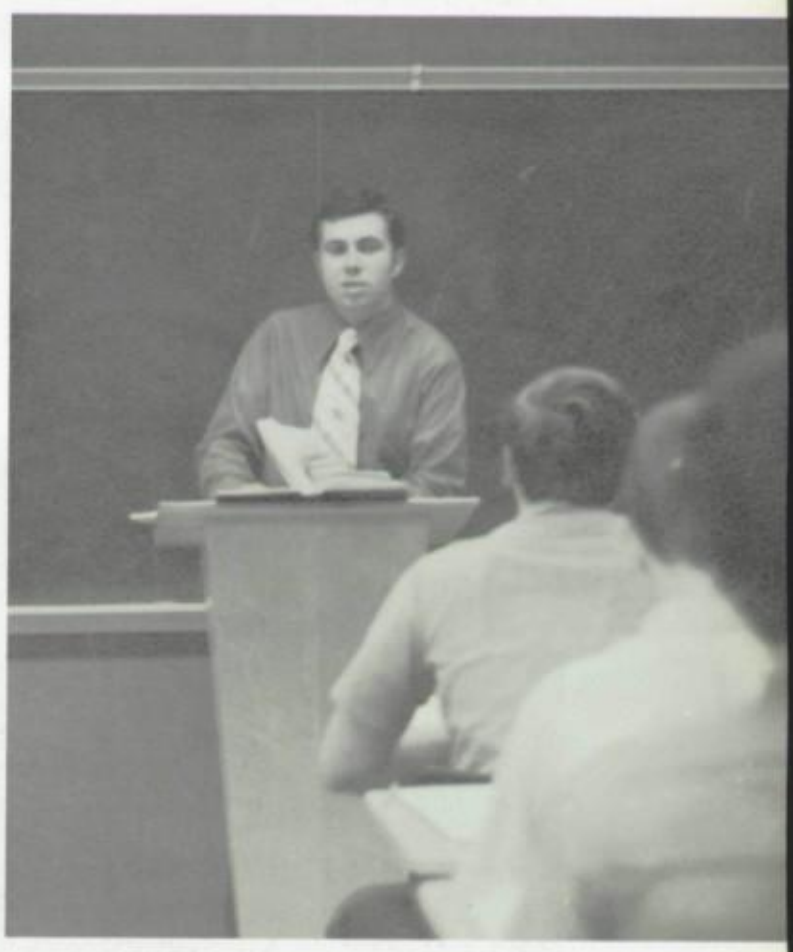
"Are you sure that's right?"



"If I ever get this figured out, it will be a miracle."

Miss Hart explains a difficult problem.

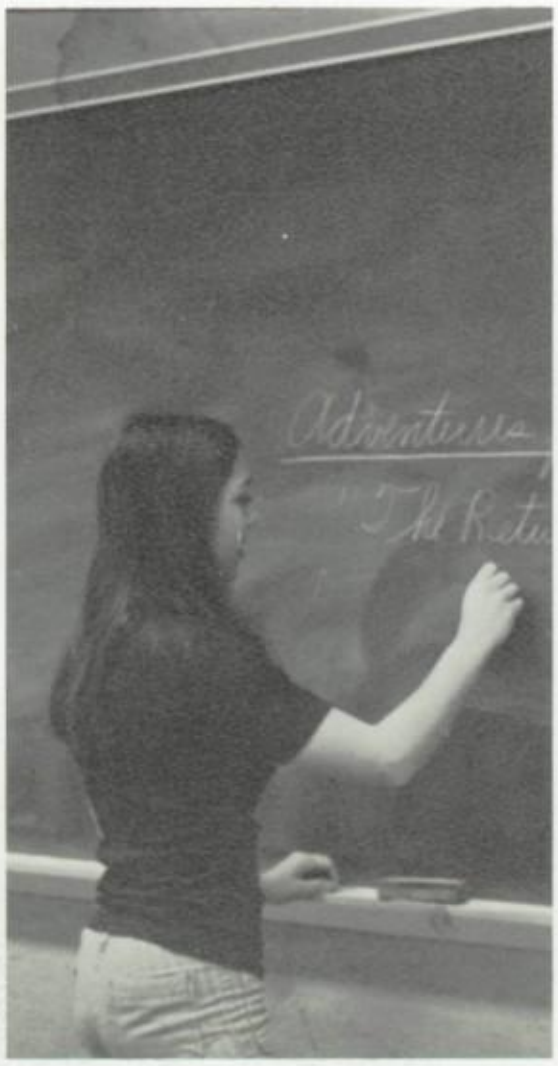
Roger and Jim study diligently before the "big quiz".



"Okay, Phil, what did I just say?"

"Oh, Miss Hart, I already know all that. Tell me something new."

"a time"



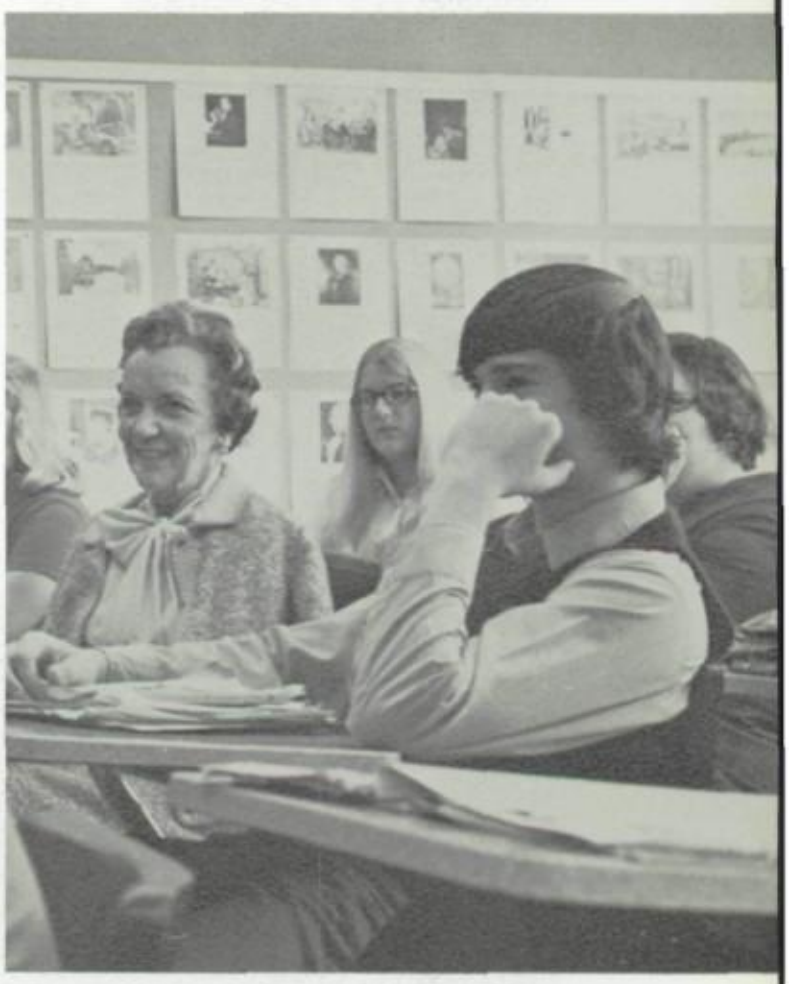
Mrs. McGraw helped Robin Hood and Neldene Smith with Word Wealth.

English is a time to learn. This learning consists of many things. There is grammar, Shakespeare, poetry, fiction, drama, nonfiction, speech, advanced composition, and word wealth.

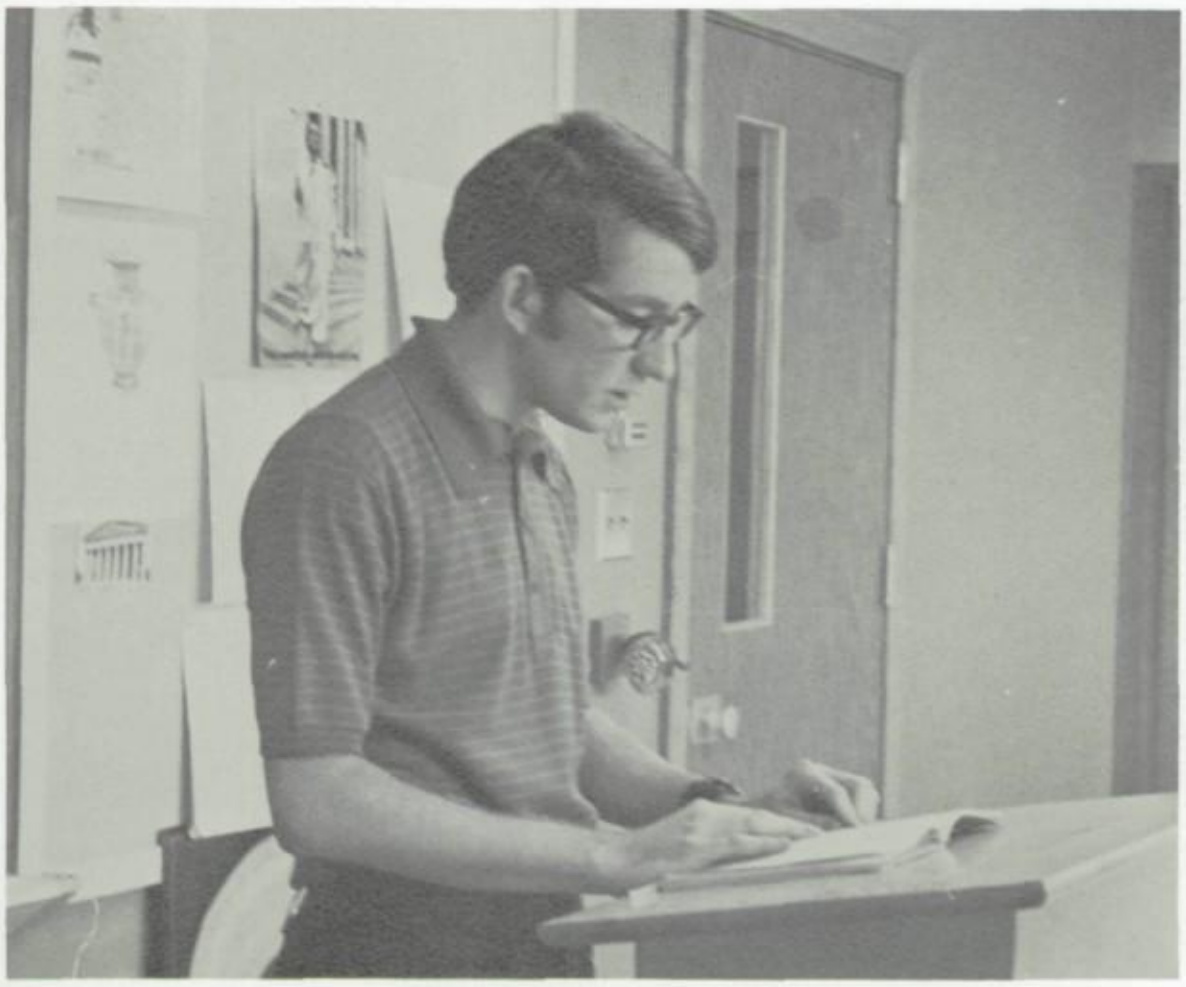
This year two new teachers were added to the English department, Miss Long, who student taught under Mrs. McDowell last year, and Mr. Shopa. They add to the fine English teachers here at T.L. who are here to help and they do!

"to learn"

Is it Mark Shook or Tim Rossivich? Speech classes practiced putting make-up on each other.



Mrs. Gamble's class listens attentively to an oral interpretation.



"And now for my next selection . . . . This little pig went to market; this little pig stayed home . . . ."

foreign languages:

As any student taking Spanish knows when the period for widening his knowledge in this foreign language comes around, he reports to the language lab, room 220 and Mrs. Hart, or room 218 and Mrs. Gurierrez.

In Advanced Spanish, the students make newspaper reports and every nine weeks they had to read a Spanish book and make a book report on it. Second and third year students listened to tapes and translated excerpts from plays.

Karen Ellis tries to translate her assignment.

"Now the difference between estar and ser is . . . ."

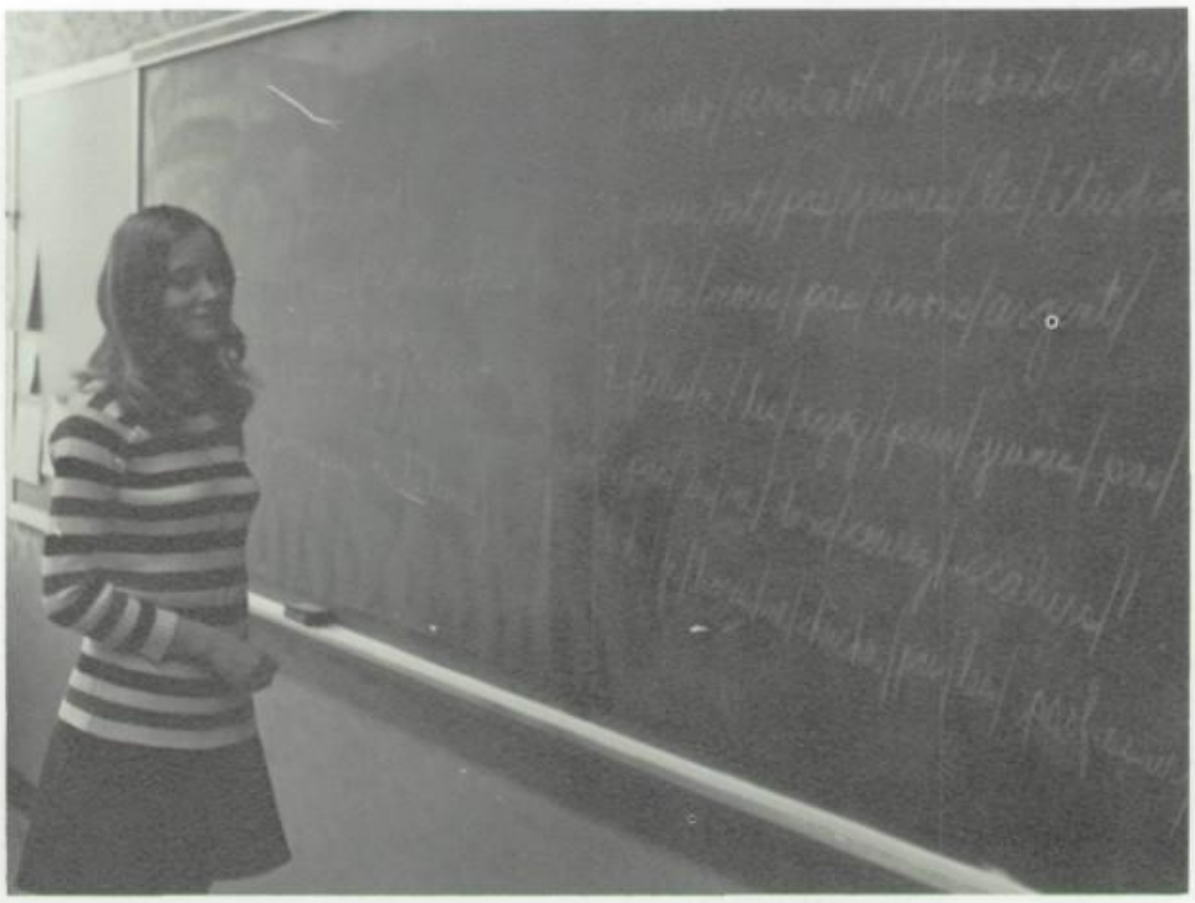
Linda and Mike are beginning to wonder if this might be Greek.

spanish and french

An addition to the Foreign Language Department at T.L. in 1971 was French. The instructor for the course used such entertaining materials as "The Cat in the Hat," written in French, of course, and "Bondour Peanuts." where the reader learned such informative things as Snoopy barking in French.

"Students, each with their own special French names as Nicole, Antoinne, or Lizette, reviewed their lessons by playing Monopoly or Scrabble.

The Seirre runs through Paris and thats only 4,136 miles away.



"Madame Yater, C'est toujours le meme chose!" (Always the same thing.)

business classes

"Harry, you are not to write in your book you are to write on your paper!"

Typing students learn to operate manual typewriters and then advanced to electrical ones in the second year course.

Shorthand students met in the room equipped with electrical typewriters and learn to take dictation from taped recordings.

Bookkeeping and Record keeping classes monopolized adding and calculating machines when they worked on practice sets although they also did a great deal of figuring "manually." Practice sets were made more realistic through the use of Post Office and Bank stations.

Rhonda Voorhis and Sandy Kubly put finishing touches on their mosaic.
The complicated process of macrame is demonstrated by Bob Fenstermaker.

Art display, "Neat. Right?"

Students are busily trying to find pictures to use for drawing.

Albrecht Durer, El Greco, Raphael, Titian, Vincent VanGogh, Francisco Goya, Paul Gauguin, Henri Matisse, and Edward Manet were all part of Art I and II.

These names don't sound familiar as members of the Twin Lakes student body, though.

Students, under the tutorage of Mr. Tucker, could tell you that these men are artists.

The classes studied art history and discovered their own hidden talents as artists.

Art III was introduced for the first time. It consisted of independent study in the area in which the aspiring artist chose.

Projects ranged from Expressionism to Christmas decorations to ceramics.

Students explored the areas of oil painting, acrylics, and various printing techniques.

home economics

A problem that these students face is recognizing that buying, planning, and much of the routine work around a home are now shared by planned problems in buying commodities needed in every home. They also engage in projects that are common activities in families, such as cooking and serving meals, minor sewing jobs, and child care.

These two seamstresses combine skill and hard work to finish their garment. Upper left: Patti Robertson adds the finishing touch to her cape.

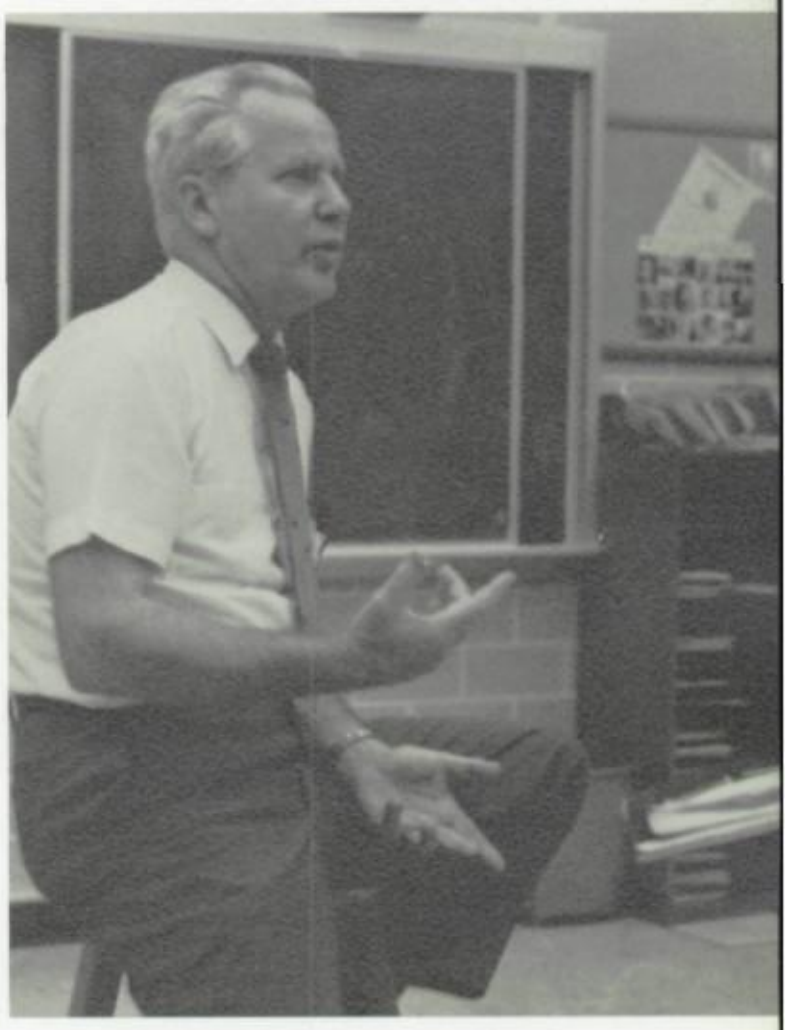
"we know the score"

"Why can't we study 'Chicago'?"



"Lecture 72-B: Why we are here."

Debbie Mills and Brenda Bowen admire Beth Dickerson's new piano composition.

Pupils of Mr. Powlen's music class live by the motto "we know the score."

First semester involves the mechanics of music, including studies of the scale, intervals, triads, and harmonies. Some ear training is introduced.

Music appreciation and history are studied during the second semester of the class.

Students hear the evolution of music from the single line chants to complex instrumental forms of the nineteenth century.

"to teach is to learn"

In their senior year some students participated in the program of exploratory teaching. Each student spent about two hours every day helping a teacher. The exploratory teacher chose the area of teaching in which he wished to participate. This program gave the exploratory teacher a chance to see exactly what teaching involved and to see if it was really the occupation he wanted to pursue.

This program gave pre-vocational information and experience for those interested in the teaching profession. It also allowed the student to realize the responsibility placed on the teacher.

Although the exploratory teacher enjoyed each session held with the students, he had duties to perform. They often prepared seating charts, read stories, and helped the children in their daily work.

physical education

After an hour of strenous exercise and screams of the victims, phys. ed. is over. But the memories of the pinching, biting, and clawing remain among the most vivid images.

Above the groans of the reluctant students this explanation was heard: "This exercise was designed to tighten your . . ." Although Mrs. Hoff tried to make exercising interesting, the girls were too tired to see the advantages.

Throughout the year boys and girls participated in P.E. in separate classes. They engaged in such sports as volleyball, soccer, hockey, basketball, baseball, and many other competitive sports.

This year a new program was introduced. Swimming for both girls and boys was enjoyed by all.

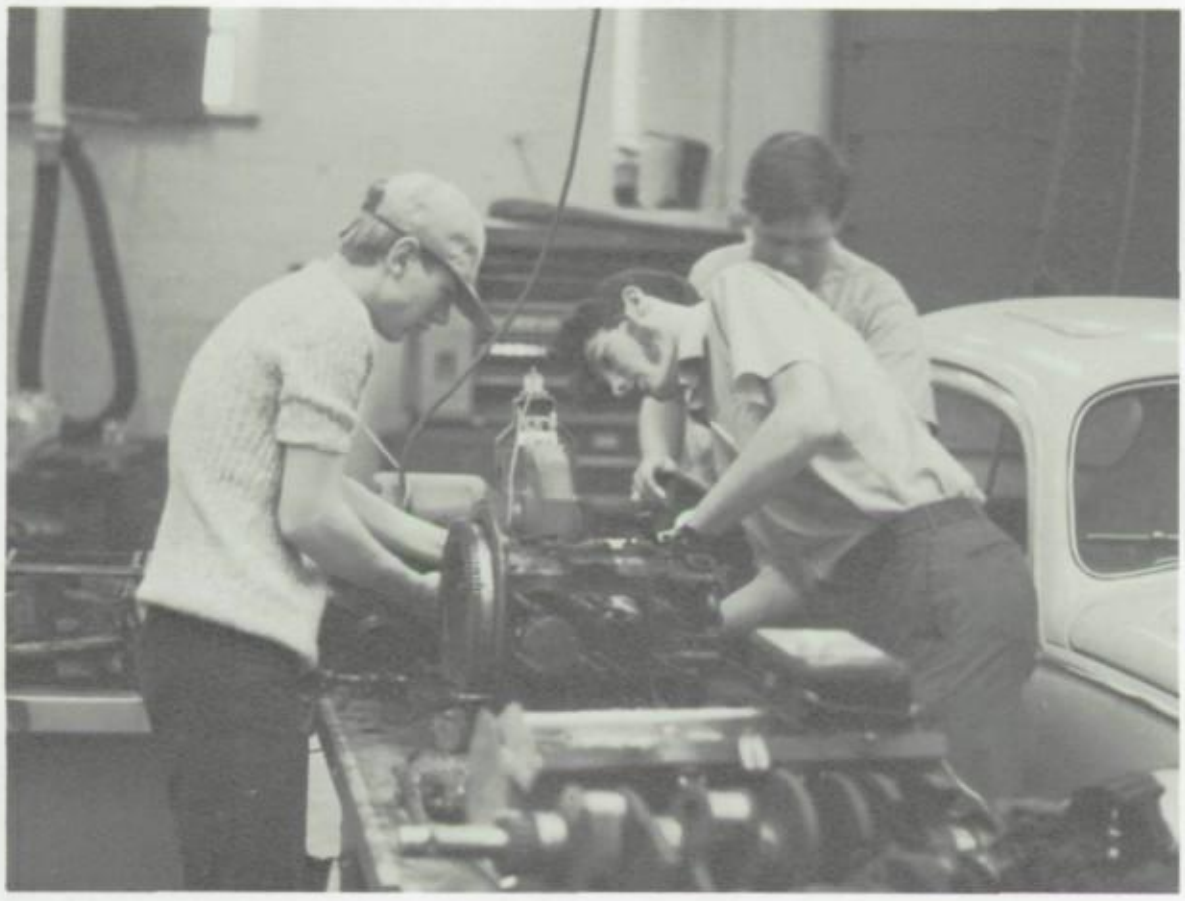
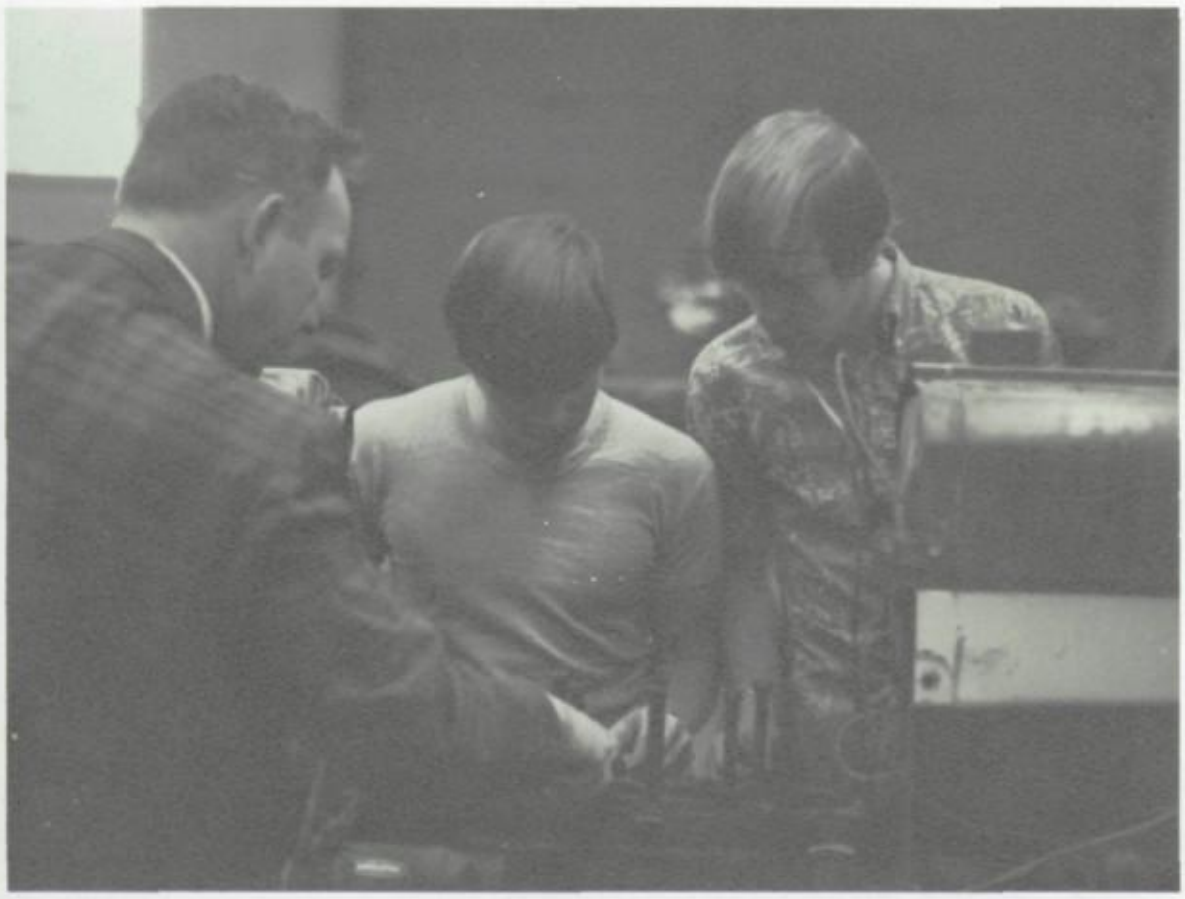
industrial arts



"Are you sure this is going to run?"



In the area of Industrial Arts students explored many fields of study. They were involved in the use and study of wood, plastics, metal, auto mechanics, electronics, and drafting.

Students entered these specialized courses in order to develop their skills so that they, in later years, may be able to compete successfully in the job markets or attend a college or university.

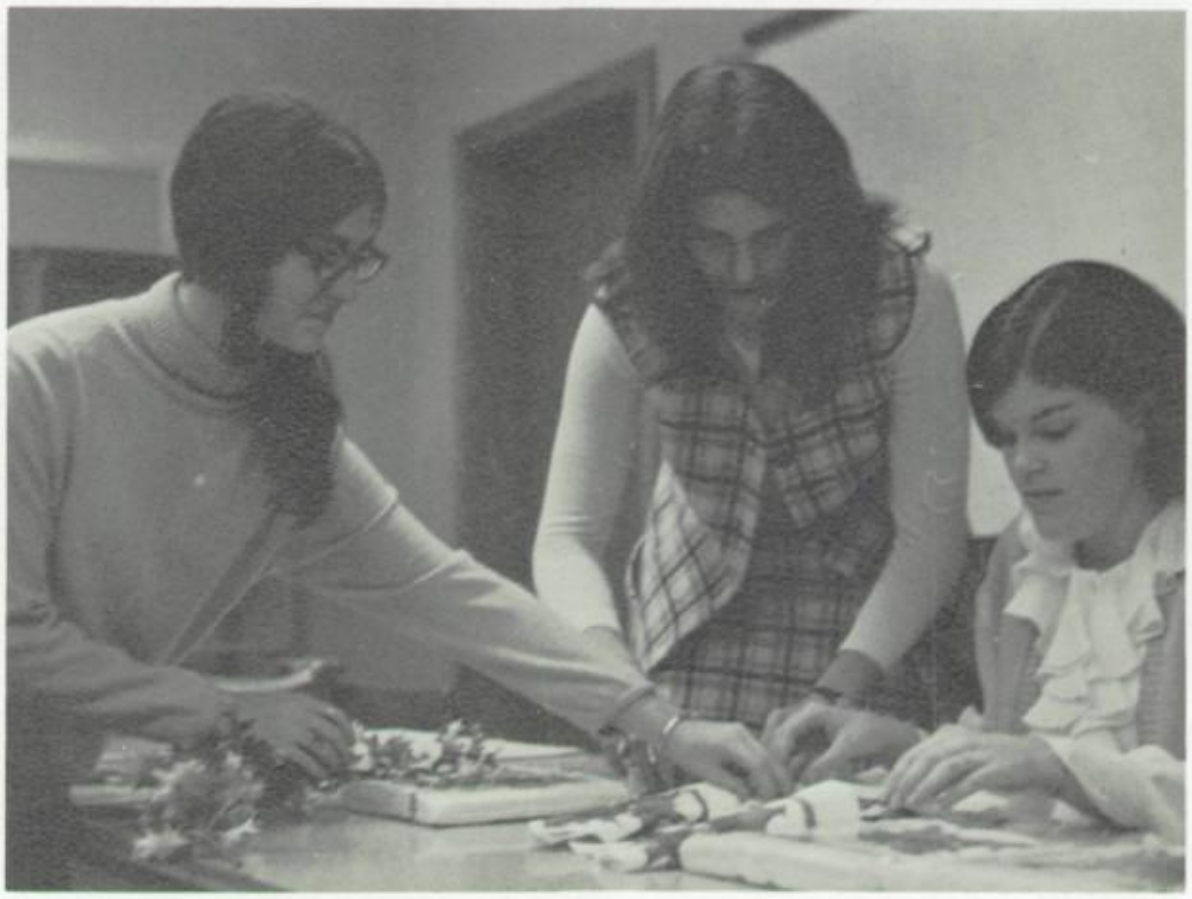
t. l. sunshine society

"with love in my heart"

With their motto, being "Others", the Sunshine Society's purpose is to help others by spreading sunshine to the community. The members have many projects and activities such as: an informal initiation for new members, concessions at all home football games, hospital favors, parties for the C.A.R. children, and a mother-daughter banquet in the spring.

Officers for 1971-72 were: President, Jane Erwin; Vice-President, Diana Roth; Secretary, Brenda Rayburn; Treasurer, Mary Kilmer; Sponsors, Miss Long, Mrs. Hart.

Jane Erwin installed as Sunshine president for 1971-72.



The past year the Sunshine Favors Committee has been making tray favors for the hospital each month. These girls are making December favors: Cindy Altman, Diana Roth, and Jane Erwin.

Debbie Mills prepares a cutting of A Death In the Family for her dramatic interpretation.

Getting up at 5:00 a.m. (or earlier) becomes a habit for the members of the speech team. Traveling all over Indiana, students gained experience in speaking plus many friends from across the state.

Twin Lakes was proud to have this year's senior Debbie Mills represent the school in the national speech contest held at Stanford University last June. Debbie competed with her dramatic interpretation of "The Death of Bessie Smith."

The twelfth speech invitational was held on December 11, 1971. A total of approximately 600 students competed in debate, student congress, and solos.

the spirit boosters

Kneeling: Charlene Roth. Standing: Marsha Ecklund, Brenda Jones, Debbie Burnett, Sheila Brooks. Top: Karen Sink.

The Twin Lakes spirit boosters are the hard working cheerleaders, pom-pom girls, and twirlers. The cheerleaders with their perfected cheers lead us on to victory. The pom-pom girls, a new addition to Twin Lakes, and the twirlers entertained the crowd at the Twin Lakes basketball games. They were a great success, but it took many long hours to learn the complicated routines.

baseball—another excellent season

Twin Lakes baseball program again proved to be a big winner. This can be attributed to Twin Lake's defensive play and to their powerful offensive punch at the plate. Twin Lakes also won the conference title for the 3rd straight time, and the sectional for the fourth straight time.

golf has another fine season

Twin Lakes golf team had a successful season, winning 17 meets while losing only 3. The great success may be contributed to the leadership of Mr. Dove. The seven seniors on the team put forth their best in order to achieve our Twin Lakes victories.

From Left to right: Eric Olson, Dan Sharp, Jim Mann, Jeff Cooley.

Twin Lakes football team again finished with a winning season. Along with the winning season, they also captured the Northwest Hoosier Conference championship.

After losing their first two games, the Indians came back strong with four victories in a row. Included in these were two conference victories over North Judson and Knox.

Twin Lakes players dominated the conference teams by placing Fishel, Armstrong, and Winings on the offense, and O'Neill, Hughes, and Winings on defense.

"No applause please, everyone knows T.L. is great!"

"OK guys, only 10 more laps to go!"

Cross country, led by its two top runners Jon Fox and Matt Emigh, had a winning season of 6-3. Jon Fox broke a course record with a 9:37, a conference record with a 9:27 which tied us with Winamac. The invitational at Twin Lakes brought us to 3rd placing out of 16 teams. In Delphi's Invitational Twin Lakes among the 20 teams placed 5th. The 3rd place was taken by Twin Lakes in the Western Invitational.

Twin Lakes carried a 2nd out of 19 teams in the sectional and moved on to the regional. Jon Fox placing 5th and Matt Emigh placing 7th brought us to 8th place in the regional.

Although the Twin Lakes basketball team has only won five games to date, they are a vastly improved team from last year. The team headed by a new coach, Mr. Dilling, was runner-up in the Holiday Tournament held at Delphi. Twin Lakes pulled off three quick upsets one against Harrison and two against arch rival Delphi in less than seventy-two hours.

Twin Lakes team was led by seniors Warren Whitaker, Jeff Fishel, Mark Gamble, and juniors Jeff Brown, and Ron Houston.

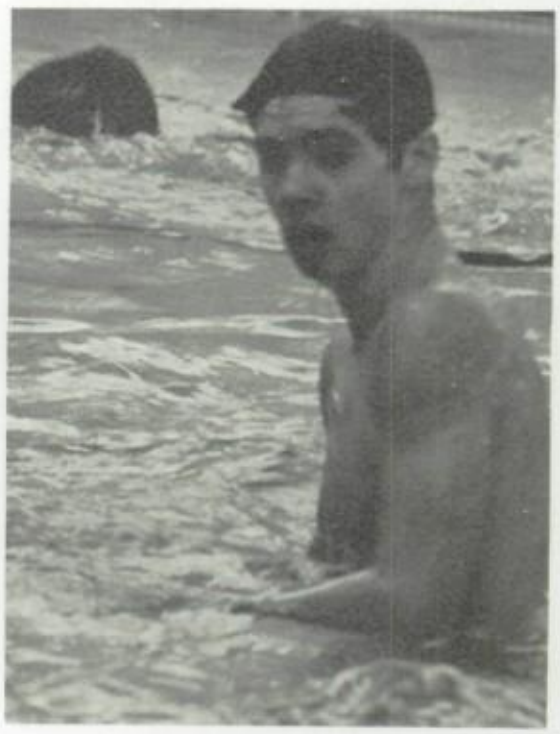
Swimming, an infant sport at Twin Lakes, took its first year in stride with a win loss record of 3-7.

Under the leadership of Coach Stockwell, Mike VanHorn went undefeated for 9 meets in the 100 free style. Backing Mike up were two other seniors; Joe Lingerfelter—400 free style, and Ray Dill with the backstroke.

Breaking the water are two underclassmen hopefuls, Mark Lindborg sprinter, and Jim McClintic with the breast stroke and butterfly.



Mike VanHorn gets off to another great start!

administrators

With the opening of a new school year Twin Lakes opened its doors to a new principal.

After graduation from Ball State University, Mr. Pinkerton taught and coached at Wabash High School, then for the next eight years at Muncie.

Before coming to Twin Lakes he was assistant principal at Griffith High School.

Mr. Pinkerton initiated more school spirit by his enthusiasm for all school activities.

Assistant Principal, Mr. James Chilton, grew up in Brookston. He graduated from there and attended Purdue University. He and his wife have three children.

Before coming to Twin Lakes, he taught social studies at Medaryville for seven years.
